"KUDZU" HAY

Few persons in Florida, or the United States for that matter, know what "Kudzu" is. It sounds like a new-fangled drink or a patent medicine, but it is neither. Instead it is a forage plant and one which is more valuable as feed for stock than cowpeas, velvet bean, red clover or timothy hay.

Kudzu is splendid either as hay crops or for pastures and is sufficient in either way to keep in good condition stock of any kind. Its yield is approximately ten tons to the acre and analyses 17.60 protein.

C. E. Pleas now has about thirty acres in Kudzu and is adding about ten acres yearly to that already planted. Speaking of Kudzu to a representative of The Journal Mr. Pleas said:

"Kudzu is no longer an experiment. We cut about 15 tons of hay last fall that was about 50 per cent kudzu and only recently fed the last of it. We now have about 10 acres that we are cutting from that will average 11-12 tons per acre of practically pure kudzu. There are some briars in it yet, as it was an old abandoned peach orchard. This was planted in 1910 and is the piece that made one last year's hay."

"While on a recent trip, I saw a field of kudzu at Tallahassee some two to three acres, that is now standing 21-2 feet deep on a level, and had made a crop of 11-14 tons hay per acre in June. The field that this patch was in is badly infected with briars, spur grass and nut grass, yet not a sign of either one could be seen except around the edges and the owner informed me that all were practically eradicated under the kudzu vines. I supplied this man with plants four years ago, and he now considers it his most valuable crop."

"Kudzu and Japanese sugar cane make practically a perfect balanced ration and the farmer who plants a sufficient acreage of the two to supply his stock, so he can sell his other crops, and be prepared to meet the boll weevil when it comes, with the least possible loss, is the one who will be hurt the least by the appearance of this pest."

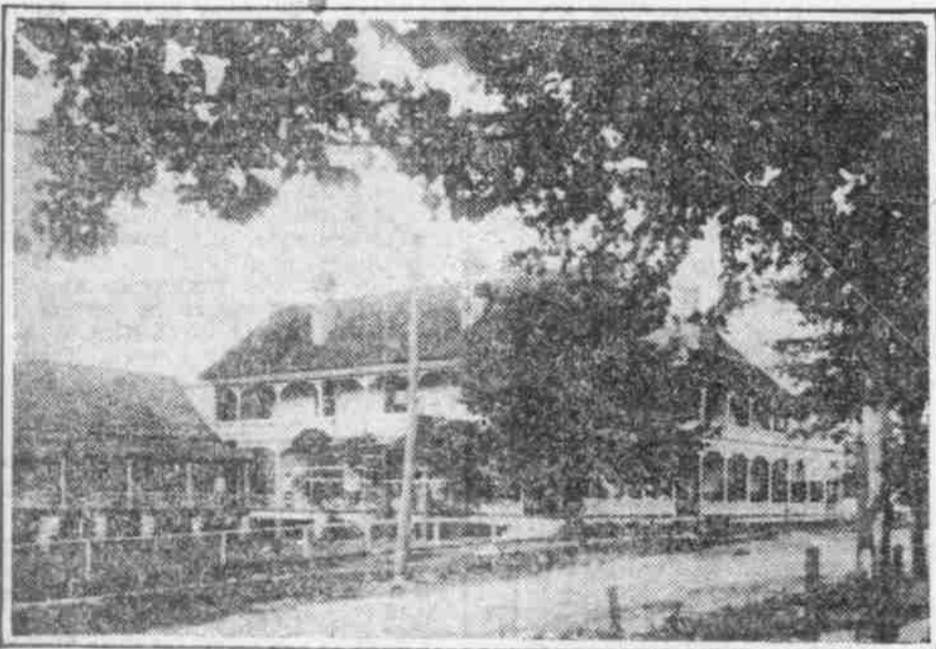

"These two forage plants make the cheapest feed that the farmer can raise and being perennial, furnish him with succulence the year round. Kudzu from April 1st to killing frost and the cane from Nov. 1st to June. We are still feeding this cane that we cut and banded last fall and by our method of handling it is still in fair condition the last of July."

Chipley State Bank

Communities and cities are usually like the banks in them. Progressive banks make progressive farmers and business men and the development of any country depends largely upon the policies of the bank officials. If they show a disposition to encourage the farmers, naturally the farmers find it profitable to work in conjunction with them, and in this respect the Chipley State Bank and the farmers and business men of the northern portion of Washington county are working hand in hand for the development of the county.

That they have succeeded is shown by a recent statement of the condition of the bank. This financial institution began business in 1906, but during that short time it has become a factor in the business world of Chipley and Washington county and by careful and judicious methods many deserving farmers have been given substantial aid and as a result the bank has constantly increased its business.

When the bank opened for business, C. B. Dunn, who is now president, was cashier and it is to his ability as a business man that the bank has prospered to such an extent. S. A. Alford, who has been active in the development of Washington county, is the vice president.

C. V. Royster has been cashier of the bank for four years and there is no more popular young man in the county than he. Polite and courteous at all times yet thoroughly devoted to the bank's interest, he has grown in the estimation of the public and the directors of the bank.

The Chipley State Bank occupies a prominent corner in a desirable part of the town and will always be a factor in the development of the county.

cars which are in use in Washington county Chipley is fortunate in possessing two concerns connected with this industry. One is the Chipley Motor Company, consisting of a garage and

Tire Filling Plant.

Tire punctures have been the drawbacks to the use of the auto since its first use. It has been thought that a composition to take the place of air in the tire is something that is impossible, but such is not the case for there is a plant in Chipley which is beyond the stage of experiment which going in to manufacture the tired on a large scale.

The composition with which the tires are filled resembles in a way the rollers used on printing presses and is a tough, elastic-like substance or rubber. When the tires are filled with this substance no punctures nor blow-outs are possible.

Possibilities of The Bay Country

a picturesque sight it was to see dozens of the white-winged craft cruising about from point to point, but these boats have disappeared now. Instead of fifty or a hundred sailing boats on the bay there are now more than four hundred motor boats owned either for private use or for transporting the travelers from one little city to another.

Three Sections.

In addition to the numerous bays or arms of the bay it is divided into what are known as "North, East and West" bay, along the shores of which houses are springing up here and there in addition to the cities which are being built. All of the bay is suitable for settlements, the banks being sufficiently high to permit building right up to the water's edge.

What is more, the building of homes either for summer, winter or the year-round residences is constantly going on. Hardly anywhere on the entire bay can one travel without seeing new buildings being erected, not merely shacks or houses for spending a few days, but handsome houses which would be a credit to cities.

Business Center.

This is too early in the day to prophecy as to where the largest city

there will be half a dozen, it matters not, for with the swift motor boats one can go from a distance of twenty miles in an hour, and with regular motor boats running on schedule time from all points, the bay country is now served by the boats equally as well as the interurban roads serve the people near the northern cities.

Opportunity For Investment.

For the man with a few hundred dollars to the man with a hundred thousand, "the bay country" offers more inducements, probably, than most any undeveloped section in the south today. No matter what one's desire may be, he can find a field somewhere on St. Andrews bay to invest his funds in a way to pay satisfactory dividends and at the same time increase the value of his holdings a hundred fold in addition to developing the country and giving the less fortunate man an opportunity of tolling for his daily bread in a climate surpassed nowhere upon the face of the globe and where he can rear his children amid wholesome environments and among a moral, progressive and intellectual people.

See For Yourself.

So far as The Journal's representatatives could learn, there are no false land schemes being conducted in Washington county, but it is always a bad idea to purchase property to a very great extent without first seeing the land. There is so much to "the bay country" that the prospective homemaker ought to see for himself and to visit St. Andrews bay is to want to live there forever.

For a winter home, for a summer home or for a place to engage in any kind of business, the "bay country" of Washington county is the place for you to investigate before deciding to locate or invest your money, the opportunities for investment being treated in another article of this edition.

There are too many ideal locations for cities, there are too many points where few railroads may build and there are reasons too numerous to mention why certain localities, according to one man's way of thinking, should be the business center on the bay, but no one can prognosticate with any degree of certainty. But no matter where the largest city may be or whether
